U.S. Drops Demand That Leftist Militias Be Disarmed

BEIRUT — A side issue that the Palestinian guerrilla presence in Beirut was circumvented Thurs-day when the United States dropped demands that Lehanese leftist militias disarm. Lehanese 30vernment sources said.

The sources also said that Lebanese Premier Shafiq al-Wazzan was expecting a memorandum from the Palestine Liberation Organization setting out its positions on several key issues for the first inne in writing.

These include PLO withdrawal from West Beirut, disposal of its weapons, and proposals for a bat-talion of Palestinian combatants to be placed under Lebanese Army

The Lebanese sources said the latest problems in the negoriations involve details such as whether the guerrillas would be allowed to take

Mr. Habib has been in Beirut for more than two weeks acting as an intermediary, together with the Lebanese government, between Israel and the Palestinian guerrillas.

Leftist sources said Walid Jumblat, leader of the National Move-ment group of leftist Lebanese factions, favored the neutralization of all of Beirut and had been told by the government several days ago that any agreement would provide that arms would be laid down throughout the city. SIDON, Israeli-Occupied Lebanon — The Israeli Army increas-ingly is allowing Lebanese Chris-tian and Shiite militiamen favorable to the Jewish state to carry arms and act as irregular forces in areas under Israeli occupation.

The informal military role conferred on these groups, the Christian Phalange militia, Maj. Saad Haddad's Israeli-sponsored Free Lebanon' militia and Shite Mosler groups of the Archive Moslem gunmen of the Amal organization, could turn out to be a new obstacle in already difficult efforts to restore sovereignty to the Lebanese government and its official army.

Both the United States and Israel tinve said that a strong Lebanese government is their goal. At the same time, Israeli policymakers have spoken privately of proposals to expand the area of southern Lebanon under Maj. Haddad's control and give their ally a stronger voice in whatever Lebanese political negotiations emerge from the institutional rubble left by sev-en years of conflict and Israel's devastating invasion.

Underlining the Israeli objectives, Prime Minister Menachem Begin said in Jerusalem Thursday night that be would "not leave

Maj. Haddad in the lurch."

"I think be should take part in the central government." Mr. Be-gin told journalists, "He should be a member of the government."

Border Territory

The sight of irregular gunmen at checkpoints on Lebanese roads fits in with the history of this troubled country since civil war broke out in 1975 and central authority crumbled. The difference now is that Israel, as the occupying force. is allowing it to happen, and that Phalange and Haddad militiamen are operating openly under Israeli protection in areas that formerly were strongly Moslem and pro-Pakstinian.

This suggests that Israeli goals include establishing a Poalange military presence in tra-ditionall. Moslem areas, reaching toward Slaj. Haddad's border territory, which in turn would expand northward by inclusion of Shiite viliages with Amal units armed by Israel tire ogh Maj. Haddad.
The Phalange militia, which is allied with and receives arms from Israel, aready controls East Beirut and Christian areas north and east of the capital. Adding it to a broadened Haddad area, controlled b. The clear intimation is that this would go beyond the narrow limits imposed by Israel on the stalled autonomy talks for the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. Judging from comments by Palestinian officials, the PLO, once vi-olently opposed to such talks, is now interested in the initiatives. One high Palestinian official maintained that the Egyptian gov-

While the Fahd plan has been emphatically rejected by Israel, it nonetheless marks an important shift in Arab thinking about the Jewish state.

The proposal was the culmination of years of government threats to bring South Africa's stubbornly independent press under tighter control. The idea of choosing a civilian vice president was put forth Monday in hopes of bringing the dissident services back into the junta in the interest of national unity. However, various government and diplomatic sources said, the three services could not agree on a candidate for civilian vice president.

The army reportedly said it would accept one only if it were former Defense Minister Amadeo Frugoli. However, the other services, particularly the air force, objected because Mr. Frugoli is associated closely with Gen. Galtieri

Air force sources said ranking officers opposed going ahead with the civilian vice president because the army gave no assurances that it would truly share power in the jun-ta. Further, the sources said, the army refused to budge from its plan to hold elections in March, 1984. The air force wants it to be no later than July, 1983.

Israel Tries to

UN Charges

By Bernard D. Nossiter

New York Times Service UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. senior United Nations official has said that Israel was trying to dem-onstrate that the United Nations was biased in favor of the Palestine Liberation Organization and hence unfit for peacekeeping in Lebanon.

The official spoke Wednesday in response to an Israeb complaint that arms had been found in a school run by the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestinians (UNRWA). The Israelis also disclosed a Palestine Liberation Organization document suggesting that the UN Interim Force in Lebanon passed on military information to the guerrillas.

Both incidents are now being investigated, UN aides said. But the senior official, who characterized the document as "fairly bogus," contended that Israel was exploiting the episodes to blacken the name of the United Nations.

The future UN role in Lebanon is becoming a major issue. Israel wants troops from the United States to replace the peacekeeping force in southern Lebanon and to patrol a 25-mile-wide buffer zone along Israel's northern border.

Military Observers

UN officials, supported by most members of the Security Council, want to enlarge the United Na-tions's role by placing military ob-servers in Beirut between the PLO and the Israeli Army. If the present buffer zone in the south is to be enlarged, they hope it will be filled by an international force:

The arms cache was shown to reporters last week at the Siblin Technical and Teacher Training Institute, a vocational school near Sidon. There, Israeli officials displayed crates of rockets and boxes of rifle ammunition.

Wednesday, Olof Rydbeck, UNRWA's high commissioner, said that an aide was investigating the affair. He said the school had been closed since Israel invaded Lebanon on June 6 and had been occupied by Israeli forces since

The Israeli government has formally protested to Mr. Rydbeck, saying: "UNRWA camps were found to contain veritable fortresses with bunkers and immense stocks of armaments and ammunition. The Siblin training center served as a cover for a PLO training facility for terrorists with the United Nations flag flying over

The note said that the discoveries confirmed a symbiotic relation-ship between UNRWA and the PLO and accused the agency of "suppressing revelations of the true nature of the PLO's involvement in the activities of UNRWA."

Warned of Attacks

The captured document, translated by the Israeli Army, was la-beled "top secret" and dated May 26, 1981. It quoted a PLO commander as saying that UN peace-keepers had warned of Israeli at-tacks on Nabatiye and other Lebanese towns. The senior UN official dismissed this message as "not very convincing, not very stun-ning." He said the places were all obvious targets for Israeli planes.

The idea that we were passing secret information from the Israeli Defense Forces to the PLO is non-sense," the official said. "We were always warning the PLO against provoking attacks."

A partial summary of just such a warning was intercepted by Israel and distributed by its diplomats 11 days ago. This release was apparently intended to justify Israel's invasion. The Israeli authorities. bowever, withheld a portion of the document that accused Israel of aggressive behavior.

ed expenditures by $4.1 billion, reducing the reserves to $2.4 billion.

These figures, like the others, were based on estimates of budget officers earlier this year, often before legislative actions on taxes and spending were completed

The survey, released Wednesday, document-ed the well-known fact that the recession has bad its greatest impact in some of the Midwest industrial states and in the Northwest, with its dependence on timber and wood products.

Among the few states where the surplus is expected to be a sizable cushion are Wyoming. Alaska, Nevada, Montana, Texas, New Mexico. Colorado and Kansas, all of which have mineral, oil or gas resources. Nevada and Hawaii were the only nonenergy states in the relatively affluent group.

But they are the exceptions. According to the survey, 37 of the 50 states expected to spend more than they took in during fiscal 1982 and 25 expected to be in the same condition next year. And 37 said they would end 1982 with a balance of less than 5 percent of their expenditures, which is the minimum figure budget officers consider a safe margin for contingencies.

Many states showed a zero reserve for both fiscal years, reflecting the constitutional requirement to trim expenditures to available revenues to avoid a budget deficit.

By David . Savage Los Angeles Times Service

LOS ANGELES — The era of mandatory busing in the nation's metropolitan school districts appears to be at an end — the result of increasingly restrictive court rul-ings, a political consensus that the cost is too high and the drastically diminished number of white children in city schools.

The U.S. Supreme Court on Wednesday rilled that limits on school desegregation voted in an election in the state of Washington are unconstitutional, but at the same time upheld an initiative by the voters of Los Angeles that put an end to large-cale busing.

In these and previous rulings, the Supreme Court has made it elear that plaintiffs must demonstrate an intent by government officials to segregate children, a condition that requires lawyers to go back decades to show that segrega-tion stems from the past. Most black ehildren attending nearly allblack schools is not enough to trigger a court order.

Poll of Parents

The vast majority of parents, white and black, oppose mandatory busing although most profess to see value in integrated education. In a recent poll by The Boston Globe, four out of five black parents in Boston said they wanted the option of whether to bus their

Ultimately, demographics may be the deciding factor in settling desegregation lawsuits. ### Cross-District Busing

City school districts in Detroit. Cleveland Baltimore and other Eastern and Midwestern cities are nearing 90-percent minority populations. In addition, the courts have consistently refused to go along with cross-district busing.

The Chicago system, which has been fighting off the idea of citywide desegregation even longer than Los Angeles, recently persuaded the Department of Justice to accept a broader voluntary approach. The population of white students in Chicago schools is 17 percent, falling about 2 percent

In Los Angeles, the school dis-trict is still busing about 41,500 students to achieve desegregation through a variety of voluntary transfer programs, Before California voters approved a 1977 propo-sition which allowed Los Angeles to end mandatory busing in 1981, the district was busing 48,200 chil-dren, 23,300 of them mandatorily.

Judging Israel Fairly

From THE NEW YORK TIMES:

1srael is, or should be, morally "different"

from other nations. So say the critics of its pre-emptive war against the PLO in Lebanon, in which uncounted civilians have died. Because Israel was born of the world's revulsion over Hitler's genocide, the critics note, they hold it to a higher code, even in war. Some of these critics are Israelis struggling to show how morally different they are from their Arab enemies. Are the critics right?

Their case is initially compelling because of the way the war unfolded. The Begin government, having reneged on its promises of "full autonomy" for Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza, lied when it said it wanted only a 25-mile cordon sanitaire. Subsequently it has probably lied about, or at least suppressed, the number of civilian casualties.

Throughout, it has been less than bonest certainly unwise — in confusing the PLO with all Palestinian aspirations. And it has seemed obvious almost from the start that the slaughter in Lebanon was clearly disproportionate to any immediate PLO threat.

But even granting all that, there is another side. Critics of the civilian hloodshed in Leb-anon fail to remember the much greater slaughter of civilians by which the PLO and Syria took over the country. By remaining in-different until the Israeli intervention, the world has erected a cynical double standard.

That does not excuse Israel from the obligation to relate ends to means, but it surely explains why most Israelis now scorn the opinion of mankind. If the world wishes to counsel the Israelis, let alone give them moral lectures on why they must adhere to a higher standard, then let the judging be fair:

· Why is it wrong for Israel to threaten tens of thousands in west Beirut to get at a few thousand remaining PLO fighters - but not wrong for those fighters to hide in civil-ian neighborhoods, using innocent people as hostages? As The Economist reported while criticizing Israel's assault on Sidon: "Civilians trying to escape from the camp were shot, apparently by the guerrillas... Palestinian prisoners the Israelis sent in to plead for the civilians to be freed are also said to have been shot."

 Why is it wrong for Israel to fight to restore a once-friendly Christian power in Lebanon — but not wrong for the PLO and Syria, with Arab League sanction, brutally to have destroyed that power?

 Why was it wrong of Israel to let the PLO grow strong enough to make all of Lebanon its base — but not wrong for Syria, Jordan, Sandi Arabia and others to support that buildup on someone else's territory and at Israel's expense?

 Why is it wrong, woefully wrong, for Israel to ignore the aspirations of Palestinians who lost their roots to Zionism — but not wrong for other Arab nations to exploit the dispersed refugees while refusing for decades to partition the old Palestine?

• Why, in short, should Israel be held to higher standards of moral conduct when most Arab states still deny it even the lowest attributes of nationhood; safe borders and legitimacy? Why should Israelis believe that what the PLO was allowed to do to Lebanon was not also its program for Israel?

Such brutal warfare requires more justification than Israel has so far provided. It needs to answer some hard questions. Each a less-embattled nation would feel obliged to less-embattled nanon would lear original follows so costly a triumph with a plausible, generous program for coexistence. Nonetheless, by fair standards, if it will finally accept the responsibility of its might, Israel deserves understanding for its plight.

Costly Disinflation

From THE WASHINGTON POST: The cruelty of this recession, and the long process of slowing down inflation, may have been in some degree inevitable. But it is a reproach to American policy that, despite much experience, the country can agree on no remedy to inflation beyond the kind of wringer that is now at work.

As usual, the people injured most severely are least to hlame — people who understand neither what has happened to their previous prosperity, nor why. Most of them were leading steady, productive lives until, for reasons far remote from their shorts and places that far remote from their shops and plants, they suddenly saw their livelihoods vanish.

The usual justification of the wringer is that it squeezes out the uncompenitive and inefficient. But things have gone far beyond that. When automobile production drops to half its previous level in three years, a lot of people are left out of work regardless of their skill and diligence. With interest rates 10 percentage points higher than the inflation rate, a great many husinesses strangle regardless of the quality of their management. It is all very well to say that, in time, labor and capital will shift to stronger industries. But for families, relocating is wrenching and often impractical. As for capital, a vast amount has evaporated in bankruptcies and the long slide of the stock market.

There is no great mystery about the process under way. More than 20 years ago the American economy embarked on an enormous expansion, and people soon began to think it would last forever. Sometimes their employers told them so. Their labor unions always told them so, loudly. Above all, the political leadership, of both parties, assured them that it was so. Of course, it wasn't.

Wages rose faster as time went on. But then in the late 1960s the great expansion slowed and became irregular. By that time, unfortunately, the rapid rise in incomes was an entrenched habit, and it continued regardless of growth rates inadequate to pay for it. Wages were not responsible for starting the great inflation of the 1970s, but they were, and are, the mechanism by which it is being perpetuated year after year. When the country's total output is not rising, higher wages to the perpetuated year after year. for some people means, necessarily, lower vages for others — or none at all.
In an ideal world, the answer would be an incomes policy — a general agreement throughout society to limit wage increases to the increases in productivity. But it is not an ideal world, and an incomes policy is evidently impossible in America and in most other countries. Most Americans simply do not accept the idea that their wage increases affect other people's employment. Even this year, right into the trough of the recession, average wages have been rising faster than inflation the wages, of course, of those people who are furtunate enough to have johs.

In Philadelphia last weekend, the Democrats continued to talk as though economic growth were merely a matter of presidential willpower and as if low growth merely meant that the president didn't care. They know better than that. The Reagan administration, in its fixation with its income tax cuts, has managed to run the interest rates up far higher than disinflation requires, and it apparently has no good ideas about what to do next. Inflation is being slowed down. But it is time to se down at a cost that the country should not continue to pay indefinitely.

Other Editorial Opinion

Hanging the Europeans

What is needed is more advance consultarion, more restraint and more consistency in U.S. foreign policy. If Europeans had responded more quickly to American demands for discussion on a joint economic policy toward the Soviet bloc made before the Ottawa summit last year, we might not be at loggerheads now. Similarly, the United States should have realized that the unilateral imposition of more severe sanctions for martial law in Poland than those originally envisaged in NATO's contingency plans for Soviet in-tervention was needlessly provocative to the allies, as was the lifting of the grain embargo.

The last thing the world needs in the midst of the deepest recession since the 1930s is politically inspired barriers to trade that could readily have been avoided. The least effective way for the United States to stand up to the Russians is to ensure that Europeans are constantly being hung for American principles that have been inadequately discussed.

When Necessity Is Luxury

How many cars does a poor country need? A lot, if it does not have an adequate mass transit system in its large cities. The situation in Pakistan, as seen in its major urban centers like Karachi, Labore and Islamabad-Rawalpindi, is quite evident. Motorcycles and cars are increasingly becoming a necessity. Mainly it is the car that determines a middle-class family's place and mobility in society.

The lack of a mass transit system is not the fault of those who are left stranded along roads that are clogged with cars we should have been able to do without. This grave lapse of our public policy has led to multiple evils. If Karachi had, say, a proper subway, the economic as well as the social life of the metropolis would have been different. As it is, transport is the most painful aspect of civic life in Karachi

Any price for a mass transit system will in the long run be economical. But we have opted for cars which obviously a normal salaried person cannut afford. It is also a measure of our economic planning and its sense of direcnon that two-wheelers and small cars are neither locally produced nor moderately priced.
What is a necessity is also a huxury. The stress seems to be on traveling in style and comfort and at a higher speed. But what is the direction in which we are traveling — and where will this take us in the end?

1907: Fleet Will Change Oceans

WASHINGTON - President Roosevelt has determined upon radical changes in the naval policy along the lines of recent New York Herald editorials advocating the transfer of the battleship force to the Pacific. The Atlantic battleship force of 16 vessels will be sent to the Pacific Coast hy the Straits of Magellan, stripping the Atlantic seahoard of the strong naval defense it has had for several years. The cruise of the fleet will be a maneuver of the highest importance as a test of naval efficiency. The president reached his decision following a conference in Oyster Bay with Capt. Richard Wainwright, of the navy, and Col. W.W. Wotherspoon, of the army, members of the joint army board.

1932: Democrats Pick FDR

CHICAGO - Franklin Delano Roosevelt, governor of New York, was nominated for the presidency of the United States by a harmony-swept Democratic National Convention by 945 of the convention's 1,154 vites. The nominee, 50 years old, who climaxed his political career by being named to lead his party to the polls against President Hoover in November, emerged from the balloting early on with a formidable majority. The first break in the balloting came when California was called and cast its vote for Roosevelt. The California switch was the signal for a wild stampede, with almost every delegation joining in except the Tammany forces, which remained sullenly silent.

U.S. Foreign Policy Is Still Up for Grabs

PARIS — George Shultz has one big advantage over his temperamental predecessor, Alexan-der Haig. That is his cool personality, which takes him unscathed through the hureaucratic wars But he will have to fight doggedly if American foreign policy is to be steaded in a period of intense pressures. At the moment, the Middle East and Europe are the hot points where decisions have to be made almost daily. It appeared during President Reagan's European trip that underlying questions had been resolved, and that Haig and his multilateralist" approach to cooperation with allies and negotiation with Moscow had come out on top. Now we know that was an illusion. The misperception is one reason for the burst of allied anger. The Europeans feel they still don't know the Reagan administration's basic guidelines. Moscow must be at least as uncertain. When is a Washington decision a decision, and what does it foretell? Despite the series of unequivocal presidential speeches and a package of pro-posals on arms control, the world is back to reading tea leaves. The most crucial issue, both for peace and foreign relations, is the outlook for the two sets of U.S.-Soviet arms talks in Geneva.

The Euro-missile talks, which began last year, and the START talks, launched this week, are not likely to near a make-or-break point for at least another year. The fight in Washington to come up with an initial U.S. position also took that long-The ontcome was a compromise, but only on the first steps. It was by definition an incomplete decision. The essential unanswered question is whether the United States really wants agreements enough to bargain for them, or whether it has agreed to talk so as to gain political elbow-room to push through a full arms buildup program.

Negotiating tactics prevent disclosure of possi-ble fallback positions at this early stage. But the bureaucratic infighting did not really settle priorities, and there are bound to be rearguard struggles about the U.S. stand within the administration. The issue will be whether to offer inducements to the Russians if they show willingness to be flexible. Shultz will have the same people to argue against as Haig did, if he wants to keep the negotiations going. Edward Rowny, chief negotiator for the strategic talks, has said that obviously an agreement can only be reached if the Russians find adequate elements in it to improve their own security as well as that of the United States. But recent measures to block the Soviet-European gas pipe-line show that an important Washington faction is still more determined on a long-term effort to overwhelm Moscow than on curbing the arms race.

It has been made clear that U.S. rearmament plans are being pressed. While that is explained as a necessary use of strength to get Soviet concessions, there is no decision yet which way to go when the moment of truth actually comes. Shultz must prepare long ahead for the struggle it will provoke within the administration.

The argument that the Russians will not budge unless the United States stands tough is countered hy the argument that Moscow will make no more than empty propaganda offers if it doesn't think the United States is really interested in arms control. These are delicate as well as fateful negotianons that cannot be managed without a perfectly clear sense of purpose in Washington.

That does not now exist. Reagan evidently remains torn between an instinctive ideological hostility to any deal with the Soviets and the need to live and let live in the world beyond America's control. Shultz's task, with support from State Department expertise, will be to continue to rub right-wing noses in the stubborn real problems that will not yield to ideological purity.

All of the people who catch the president's ear are essentially hard-liners. But some have a better sense than others of what is practical and possible, and Shultz will have to speak up firmly if their voices are not to be drowned out.

There has been a remarkable mushrooming of citizens' groups. The public is becoming sensitive to the issues; more people are looking outward again with an awareness that their lives are affected by what goes on beyond city or even national limits. This revival of the traditional American civic response offers a corrective to the deteriorating world climate, with allies as well as adversaries. Less public feuding from the administration will help ease international relations. But it will not be enough if decisions go the wrong way by default.

Foreign policy is still up for grabs.

How to Halt the Nuclear Arms Race

Jewish community, which in recent years had become more outspoken in behalf of Israel, There was a protest against the livrasion by 500 leading. AMBRIDGE Mass. — There is an easily structured, effective way to stop the escalating arms race. President Reagan should declare an open-ended unilateral moratorium, European support matters much less to Israel than U.S. support. But always subject to reversal, on the production, testing and deployment of new nuclear weapons and delivery systems. He should invite the Soviet in America, too, there is much evi-dence of troubled feelings about Leb-anon. It is known that Israel's sweep Systems. He should mylling a parallel decto Beirut worried President Reagan and his advisers, even though Secre-tary of State Haig had effectively en-

As one who has been involved in defense technology since World War II, who has always believed that minimum deterrence would prevent nuclear war, I am convinced that we need a fresh approach to tackling the problem. A moratorium is such an approach. We have three decades of failed negoriations behind us. Weap-ons agreements, with their inevitable protracted bargaining take longer than mankind can afford.

The challenge is to action, not negotiation. Once both countries have declared a moratorium, either can take the initiative to go further and further along the path.

Since there is no known defense against incoming ballistic missiles, 200 large nuclear bombs, even if they missed major cities by a few miles, would destroy the recuperative power of either side. The hasic number to keep in mind, therefore, is not the tens of thousands of bombs in existence hut the certain ability to deliver 200 on either side With the numbers By Jerome B. Wiesner presently in existence, there is no way w prevent 200 bombs (and doubtless many more) from destroying the complete social fabric of both continents. The death count — a total made up of those killed by the initial attack plus the victims of the subbuman conditions that would follow could be as much as 200 million.

Despite recognition by statesmen and scientists, from the very first nuclear explosion, that a force had been found that was too revolutionary to be considered in the framework of old ideas, the leaders of the superpowers (and increasing numbers of other nations) have not been deterred from letting nuclear weapons form the beart of their defense strategies.

Over the years there have been private and public appeals for restraint, restriction. and abolition of nuclear weapons as the essential first move toward peace and survival. Until now the race between peace-seekers and weapons experts has been unequal. Every new generation of weapons emerges faster than treaties to limit them, so that it has always been possible, as in the case of SALT-2, to argue that the finished treaty did not take into account the latest weapons.

At the same time, the awesome capabilities of the new weapons have added to the terror and also to the difficulty of restricting the arms race. It is surely for this reason that we are experiencing the public drive to halt that race. This is undoubtedly why the proposed freeze has struck so resonant a coord. But a freeze - a negotiated, balanced, verifiable freeze - might, like all previous treaty attempts, take an unacceptably long time to negotiate. SALT-1 took three years, SALT-2 took seven, only to be rejected by a new administration. How long would it take to negotiate a "balanced" freeze?

A unilateral moratorium is a safe way out of this dilemma. Ending the arms race with a moratorium means giving up efforts to match weapon for weapon and achieve numerical balances, and depends instead entirely upon a secure deterrent.

mean "stop everything," but it should halt testing, production and deploy-ment of new nuclear weapon systems. A moratorium is a way of arresting the arms race. What we ultimately do and how far we finally go beyond this easy initial stage depends npon how each side responds. The unilateral moratorium should be just a first step in global psychotherapy.

Reknitting U.S. Links To Europe

By Joseph Kraft

WASHINGTON — In Paris las Friday, François Muterrani gave a visiting businessman a piece o his mind on the subject of Ronak Reagan. The Socialist president of Errore said that in view of their dif France said that, in view of their dif ferent political outlooks, he had made a special point of trying to establish personal rapport with Reagan. He re counted efforts at Ottawa, Yorktown Cancun, Washington and Versailles But he said he had been forced to the conclusion that there was no single issue on which he could trust the president of the United States.

That little episode expresses a general breakdown of the Atlantic connection. The West Germans, the British and the smaller European countries are as mad at Washington as are the French. Three weeks after the summit meetings in Versailles and Bonn, rebuilding allied unity has again acquired urgency.

The latest spell of Atlantic disarray rests on several issues, some familiar — high interest rates, the Middle East. But to old grievances have recently been added two new ones.

one involves steel. After long negotiations with the European Economic Community, the Commerce Department found that steel exports from Europe benefited from various subsidies. The United States has now imposed countervailing duties on Enropean steel, which in effect price it out of U.S. markets. The European out of U.S. markets. The European steel industry, which is already real-ing, has to find a new place to unload more than 10 percent of its exports. More important is the pipeline decision. On June 18, after marathon back-and-forth bickering, President Reagan decided to oppose to the full a gas pipeline deal long since concluded by the Europeans with the Soviet Union. His decision, in theory at the state of the st least, threatens European exports of steel to Russia. It also involves a dubious legal claim that European companies operating under license from U.S. firms are subject to U.S. law.

Most of the European leaders be-lieved that President Reagan had moved away from the pipeline deci-sion at Versailles. The evidence does indeed suggest that the president-fi-nally acted out of a spiteful determination to show the Europeans his muscle and thus win the applicate of right-wing supporters at home.

Personal relations among proud leaders have now been badly dainaged. Regaining allied cohesion, is bound to be long and difficult. But unless a modicum of harmony is sestored, the United States and the allies will not be able to work effectively on any of the common prob-lems they face, especially in deal-ing with the Soviet Union.

A first stab at reknitting ties needs to be made, and the trick is to find an issue, separable from the rest, on which progress is possible. Steel is probably the best candidate. If the European manufacturers agree voluntarily to limit exports, the American companies can probably be induced to drop the complaints that led to the application of countervailing duties. Then a new arrangement can be worked out between the two officials principally involved. Fortunately, they are both sensible men — Secretary of Commerce Malcolm Baldrige and the Industries Commissioner of the EEC, Eneme Davignon.

Even if the steel handle can be grasped, bowever, nobody should mistake the meaning of the latest contretemps. The Umted States and Europe stand on the brink of a great split. At best, a long period of rebuilding lies ahead.

If he can't contribute anything useful, the president of the United States ... should at least keep his hands off the centerpiece of American diplomacy and international stability. Los Angeles Times Syndicate.

A Familiar Old South Atlantic Story

By Sumner Welles

WASHINGTON — The dangers in the dispute between Great Britain and Argentina and Chile over the sovereignty of the South Atlantic islands should not be minimized. The British government has dispatched warships to the Falk-lands. Argentine and Chilean naval units have been sent to adjacent waters, and armed forces have been landed at several points. A peaceful settlement will not be advanced by the insulting references to the two great South American republics that are being made in London, nor by the flamboyant nationalism that is being aroused in Buenos Aires and Santiago.

The British government is creating the impression that the Argentine republic is only advancing her claims at this moment because of Britain's present weakness. Yet those claims have been repeatedly advanced for more than a century, and under the accepted principles of controversies they have provoked international law they are far fill the diplomatic history of the stronger than the British claims.

The Argentines have not forgotten that Britain's seizure of these islands in 1833 was facilitated by the United States. Britain has proposed a submis-

This proposal bas been rejected by the Argentine and Chilean govern-ments, which have suggested a submission of all of the issues involved to an international conference. #### Rise in Price

One of those who helped unravel the once-mysterious tale is Esmond B. Martin, an American living in Kenya, who has investigated the fate of the African rhino since 1978 under the suspices of the World Wildlife Fund and the International Union for the Conservation of Nature

The immediate cause of the wave of slaughter of the African rhino was a rapid rise in the price of thinoceros born starting in the early 1970s, Martin said. The price on the world market went from about $35 a pound in 1972 to about $250 a pound by 1978. Since black rhinos have two horns, each weighing four pounds or more, more than $2,000 could be made from a single rhinoceros - more than the average Kenyan or Uganplains still teem with game — thousands of gazelles, topi, impa-las, baboons, water buffalo, warthogs, gnu. A pride of lions devouring its morning kill is a common sight. A single herd of elephants grazing in a marsh contained near-ly 100 animals. But in the whole western half of the enormous game reserve there are believed to be. only three rhinos left - the mother and its baby, and one

At first, no one could understand why the world price of rhino born began to rise dramatically in

Folk Pharmacopoeia

East Asian countries, particularly China, Korea and Japan, had long imported rhinoceros horn and meat for use in their folk pharmacopoeia. Contrary to popular be-lief, Martin said, the horn is not Widely valued as an aphrodisiac Only on one small section of the east coast of India is it held in high esteem for such a purpose. In the rest of Asia, the horn and other parts of the animal are steeped in boiling water and used to treat fe-

But though traditional medicine shops in Asia continued to stock thino horn and dried meat, the demand for the products on that continent did not soar, Martin found. The explanation for the sharp rise in rhino horn prices, therefore, had to be elsewhere.

The answer, Martin found by looking at trade patterns, lay in the southern Arabian peninsula: North Yemenis were importing rhinoceros homs to make handles for a ceremonial dagger, called djambia, worn as a token of reaching manhood

They are worn by 90 percent of the men in the country - it is a sign of status after adolescence." Martin said. "They wear a dagger the way I wear a tie."

North Yemen was once a poor country. While thing horn was the preferred material for diambia handles, few families had the mon-

1970s, OPEC was formed, world oil prices shot up, and crude oil production in the Middle East rose sharply. Yemenis found work in the oil fields of Saudi Arabia and the Gulf states, and began to send their earnings home. As a result, they could afford more thino born and the demand drove the price up. North Yemen now imports about 40 percent of Africa's annual rhing born production, with most of the rest still going to Asia. Martin said.

He and other conservationists agree that, if the pattern continues. the African rhino will become extinct. But there is little agreement on what to do about it.

Norman Myers, a British conservationist and author of "The Sinking Ark," a book about the extinction of species, believes that traditional methods of fighting poschers are doomed to failure. Myers, a resident of Nairobi. oted that $2 million to $3 million is being spent each year in Kenya alone to protect rhinos from poachers, without succe

It's understandable when they can make more for a few minutes of looking the other way than they earn in a year," he said.

Myers favors a different approach. He would use diplomatic efforts to persuade North Yemen to bar the import of rhino borns, If necessary, he said, the issue should be taken to the United Nations. "If the Yemenis got up to speak at the UN and everybody walked out, maybe they would get the message.
This is not traditional conser-

'Go to the Source'

Martin plans other nontiaditional methods to try to preserve the rhinoceros. He is organizing a the largest market for the the illegal rhino goods. He bopes to persuade governments, importers, physicians and pharmacists to stop buying rhino horn and meat.

"We want to go to the source of the trade," he said. "Rhino is only one of bundreds of products used in traditional medicine in Asia. We think if we explain the conse-quences of trade in thino products. people will be willing to stop it. If the African Thinoceros goes, there is little hope for the survival of rhinos anywhere on earth. The three other species — the Indian, Javan and Sumatran rhinos have been oearly wiped out.

If the depredations in Africa continue, therefore, the rhinoceros, like the unicorn whose legend it may have inspired, may someday be a creature of art and fable only.

ST. LOUIS - Alcoholism is caused by a combination of genetic and environmental factors, but does not result from a child imitating his parents' drinking habits, according to a researcher who studied adopted children in Sweden.

Dr. Robert Cloninger and colleagues at St. Louis' Washington University studied 913 men and 862 women who were adopted at very young ages. He said the study showed that children raised by alcoholic adoptive parents did not have an increased risk of alcoholism but in fact might have less risk.

The study found that when the namral parents of the adopted children were alcoholics, so were 33.3 percent of the sons and 9.1 percent of the daughters. When neither natural parent was an alcobolic, 14.7 percent of the sons and 2.8 percent of the daughters were alcoholics.

For Alcoholics Is a Dismal Failure

Experiment in Controlled Drinking

By Lois Timnick Las Angeles Times Service

OS ANGELES — Ten years ago a select cadre of 20 men left California's Patton State Hospital near San Bernardino with special identification cards in their wallets. Each was an alcoholic wbo, the card said, had been retrained as a "social drinker."

The Patton project was said to be the first scientifically sound and sizable demonstration of the theory that some alcoholics might be able to drink without slipping from sobriety. Although the notico was not new, it spurred several further studies, notably a Rand Corp. report of 1976 that reached a simi-

Such studies led many people, including doctors, to change their view of alcoholism. Controlled drinking began appearing in books and journals as an acceptable alternative to abstinence.

Now, however, a team of researchers at the Veterans Administration hospital in San Diego, the University of California, San Diego, and the University of California, Los Angeles, have re-examined that first pivotal study and traced the lives of its 20 subjects over the last decade.

Their findings, part of which will be published in Science, show the behavior modification effort to have been an abominable failure. Nineteen of the 20 men trained to drink are not now and never have been drinking moderately; the one who is doing so appears to have been mistakenly classified as an al-

The majority were rehospital-ized for alcoholism treatment within a year after their discharge from the research project," the new study finds. Follow-up studies of the Patton men conducted at one, two and three years had claimed that most of the men were "func-tioning well," and doing better than a control group given conventional treatment. No one knows how many alcoholics may have died or spent most of their remaining years drunk in the belief that they could drink socially and keep it under control - or how many clinicians have attempted to treat alcoholie patients in the belief that drinking a little, rather than not at all, had been shown to be better for some.

But the fates of those original 20 men are known. The new study reports that:

• Four are dead of alcohol-related causes. For example, one was found floating face down in a lake, and another committed spicide by jumping off a pier. Both had blood-alcohol levels three times that considered legal drunkenness.

• Eight continued to drink excessively despite repeated damaging consequences, such as job loss, arrest, marital breakup or hospital-

 Six bave abandoned their efforts at controlled drinking and multiple rehospitalizations.

· One is missing; he was certified as "gravely disabled" because of drinking about a year after being discharged from the Patton

The follow-up study — "Con-trolled Drinking by Alcoholics? New Findings and a Reevaluation of a Major Affirmative Study" was conducted by psychologists Mary L. Pendery of the San Diego Veterans Administration Medical Center and UC-San Diego and Irving M. Maltzman of UCLA, and by Dr. L.J. West, chairman of psychiatry and biobehavioral sciences

Their findings contradict the results claimed by the original inves-tigators, Mark and Linda Sobell. The Sobelis' work at Pattoo - he was then a graduate student and she was an undergraduate — launched their careers. The new study also contradicts results reported by a team headed by Glenn R. Caddy at Old Dominion University in Norfolk, Va., that condueted the third-year follow-up.

Reached in Toronto, where he works at the Addiction Research Foundation, Mark Sobell said that be still embraces controlled drinking as a possibility for some al-coholics, but that he oow considers it a goal for people with less serious drinking problems.

The Sobells reported that 73 percent of their controlled-drinking subjects were doing well after one year. That percentage had risen to 85 percent at the two-year mark. At three years, Caddy re-ported that half the subjects his cam interviewed were drinking only moderately or oot at all. But Pendery's team, and a Los Angeles Times reporter who interviewed several men in the study, ound gross discrepancies between the earlier reports and the alcoholics' actual states. All of the first 16 men in the project resumed heavy drinking soon after being dis-charged, often before they even got home from the bospital. Thirteen of the "social drinkers" were rehospitalized within the first year, 10 of them readmitted to Patton.

Herald Tribune ran

On 24 May, 1982, The International

Pendery's team sought out relatives to confirm or deny the men's stories and sifted through hospital and police records and coroners' reports. Their follow-up took six

The Sobells' results were considered impressive despite the small number of subjects, because of the project's meticulous scientific design and its detailed, once-a-month follow-up.

But both those features are oow in question. Pendery's team says that, either the Sobells and Caddy did not actually do the follow-up interviews; they did do them and chose to ignore oegative informa-tion; or a bit of both. Few of the alcoholics or their families remember being contacted frequently. and some of those who were contacted say they lied.

Pendery's team also alleges that the Sobells may have attempted to stack the outcome: The men with the best prognosis were assigned to the experimental group; subjects who misbehaved were switched to the control group.

But the discrepancies go beyond quibbles over methodology: "It is clear that patients who were reported as successful examples of controlled drinking were in fact oot successful but readmitted to the same hospital for pathological drinking during that same time."

L.J. West of UCLA said. "This is an indictment of the credibility of the entire study."

The Rand Corp. backed down considerably in a 1980 follow-up of its original study after finding that only a very few alcoholics were successful at controlling their drinking over the long haul.

Another ooe-time enthusiast of controlled drinking, Dr. John Ewing of the University of North Calina, revised his thinking after finding that, two to four years after he trained 35 alcoholics as social drinkers, all had relapsed. Dr. Joe Takamine, chairman of the American Medical Association's task force on alcoholism and the immediate past president of the Alcoholism Council of California, said the debunking of controlled drinking "proves what many of us have long felt clinically, that abstinence is the only safe path for alcoholics."

PEC has indirectly added to rhinos' perils.

U.S. May Resurrect A-Fuel Project

By Milton R. Benjamin

WASHINGTON - The White House is considering a recommendation that it revive and nnderwrite a nuclear fuel reprocessing plant in South Carolina that President Jimmy Carter blocked because it would produce plutomum, a material that can be used to make bombs.

The recommendation, sure to become an issue among those who are anxious about the proliferation of nuclear weapons, has been made by the Department of Ener-gy to President Reagan's Cabinet Council on Natural Resources. It affects a half-completed reprocessing plant in Baruwell, S.C., owned by Allied General Services Inc., a consortium made up of Allied Chemical Corp., Gulf Oil

Corp. and Royal Dutch Shell. En-

who is from South Carolina, has long favored the plant. Under the new proposal, the government would first undertake to buy the plutonium the plant produced, thus guaranteeing it a market. In addition, the government then would promise to buy out further investors in the plant if government policy turned against reprocessing in the future. The administration, under the proposal, would also commit itself to try to provide "an improved regulatory and licensing environment" to facilitate completion and operation of the Barnwell plant. About $400 million is being sought from additional investors. One interested firm is said to be the Bechtel Group Inc., whose president is Secretary of State-designate George P. Smitz. Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger is a former Bechtel officer. A White House decision on the new proposal is expected late next month. The Barnwell plant is designed to separate plutonium from the spent fuel elements of nuclear power plants. About $250 million had been spent oo it when Mr. Carter ordered the "indefinite deferral" of commercial seprocessing in the United States in 1977.

Mr. Carter argued that use of reprocessed plutonium to refuel atomic power plants would oot be economically competitive with slightly enriched uranium, and that the spread of reprocessing technology to Third World coun-tries would increase the availability of photonium that could readily be used to fabricate nuclear weap-

Mr. Reagan, however, has re-peatedly declared since his inauguration that be favors development of a commercial reprocessing industry in the United States.

While Mr. Reagan rejected an earlier recommendation from Mr. Edwards that the government buy the plant, the president instructed the Energy Department to "devel-op further recommendations for my further review on how to create a more favorable climate for private reprocessing efforts." The result is the proposal that has gone to the White House, which would provide government protection for private investors in the Barnwell plant against "future policy changes" and which would have the government assure a "near-term demand for services."

Completion of the Barnwell Nuclear Fuel Plant represents the only practical means of achieving a domestic reprocessing capability within the next 10 years," the re-

Dayco Embroiled in Court Fight

Firm Accuses Agent of Placing Fictitious Orders

By Michael Blumstein

New York Times Service NEW YORK — The company was big and so was the opportunity. In 1979, Dayco had record sales of $740 million, stood among the 400 largest U.S. industrial companies and was offered a chance to break into a vast new market: the Soviet Union.

With Dayco's domestic sales down because of a slump in the automotive industry, and profits sliding the company welcomed the $117 million of Soviet orders for belts and hoses that were placed by a New York sales agent.

Dayco cranked up its plants and, in an unusual move, prepaid $13 million in commissions to its sales agent. But the Soviet deal turned sour, Early this year, Dayco announced that most of the orders had turned out to be "entirely fictitious," took an after-tax write-off of $11.7 million and recorded a loss for the fiscal year ended last Oct. 31.

Was Dayco hoodwinked, or did it take too many risks on the chance of raising sagging fortunes?

A Tangled Case

The company, a diversified manufacturer of industrial products, based in Dayton, Ohio, offers one answer, while the New York sales agent gives another. Most of the charges and cocotercharges are unfolding in a tangled case in Federal District Court in New

The sales agent in question is Foreign Transactions Corp., founded in New York City in 1976 by Edith Reich, its president. According to Dayco's suit against Mrs. Reich and Foreign Transactions, she first got in touch with Dayco in May, 1979, to inquire about selling its products to the Soviet Union, and, a month later, a "relationship" began.

Instead of closing plants and laying off workers because of declining sales, Dayco began churning out the goods. However, by last January, the company was woodering why the merchandise was piling up in warehouses in the United States, West Germany and the Soviet Union, and why it had only received $6.6 million on the more than $47.2 million of goods already produced.

At that point, Dayco hired Joho 1, Huhs, a New York lawyer well versed in Soviet trade, to lead a delegation of Dayco's senior managers to Moscow to investigate. According to an affidavit from Mr. Huhs, Brigette R. Jossem-Kumpf, Mrs. Reich's daughter and a Foreign Transactions employee, confessed oo the second day of the trip that $10 million of orders "do not now and never did exist," and she signed a statement to that effect.

'Fictitious' Orders

By the end of the weeklong trip, the Dayco suit said, the company had discovered that 11 of the 13 orders placed by Mrs. Reich were "entirely fictitious," while a 12th was "partially fictitious." Only one or-der, for $883,378, was genuine, the Dayco suit said. It also charged that Foreign Transactions had received two other legitimate orders for $6 million but never passed them on to Dayco.

Back in the United States, Mrs. Reich signed an agreement of March 19 that she would pay $14 million to Dayco over three years as "restitution." She made one payment of $1 million but defaulted on a second payment of $4 million, due April 1. On May 24, Dayco filed suit,

Last month, Mrs. Reich responded with some claims of her own in an answer to Dayco's suit and in a third-party suit against three Dayco officials.

Mrs. Reich maintained that Richard J. Jacob, Day-

Paribas and Warburg Plan Takeover of U.S. Concern

LONDON — Cie. Financière de Paris et des Pays-Bas and S.G. Warburg & Co. said Thursday that they plan to take control of Warburg Paribas Becker-A.G. Becker Inc. Discussions on management changes at the U.S. firm are under way, the two European financial institutions said.

Ira Wender, president and chief executive officer of Becker, is expected to resign under pressure.

The two European firms plan to raise their joint holding in Becker to more than 50 percent from the current 40 percent by exercising an option through a joint holding company, Warburg-Paribas Inc.

Reported in Trouble

In recent weeks, the 89-year-old firm has been widely reported to be in financial trouble because of losses on trading in government bonds and stock options. Last week, Becker broke its traditional secrecy about financial results to say the rumors were exaggerated.

Mr. Wender said at that time that because of sagging equity markets and low investor activity, the firm expected to report a $2million loss for the eight months ended Wednesday.

He said, however, that the com-

Oil Project To Proceed, Tokyo Is Told

TOKYO — The Soviet Unioo has told Japan it will proceed with a joint project for oil and gas de-velopment off the Soviet island of Sakhalin despite Washingtoo's ban oo sales of advanced technology to the Russians, the Japanese partner tween mid-March and May.

Some of the firm's problems predate the recent market gloom. Last year, the firm suffered an exodus of top executives. Former officials cited various reasons for the departures, including pobcy differences with Mr. Wender.

While remaining silent on the various changes believed to be in the works a Becker spokeswoman said Wednesday that the company is to hold a board meeting July 9. Top executives were summoned to a special meeting Tuesday afternoon and told that changes were in

Prices on Wall Street Show a Sharp Decline

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches NEW YORK — Prices on the New York Stock Exchange closed sharply lower Thursday amid worries about interest rates and second-quarter earnings.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which eased 0.28 Wednesday, drifted down all day but quickened its decline in the last hour to finish with a drop of 8.66 points to close at 803.27. Declines led advances by a 910-to-460 margin.

Volume slumped to about 47.9 million shares from 65.28 million Wednesday.

Analysts said that with end-ofquarter portfolio switching com-pleted Wednesday, investors start-ed pulling back from the market ahead of some of the bad news expected in July.

They said second-quarter corporate earnings are expected to be dismal, which could knock down both individual stocks and industry groups.

Wall Street is also concerned about a projected bulge in the nation's money supply during July and a very heavy schedule of Treasury auctions scheduled for the next several months, Both fac-tors could place further upward pressure on interest rates.

A rise in several short-term interest rates reinforced investors' worries in that area, including an increase in the broker loan rate this week by four major banks.

Federal funds rates, the rates banks charge one another and which influence most other rates, were stable in the early going after fluctuating wildly Wednesday and creating confusion throughout the investment community.

Weakness in energy stocks also undercut the market. Analysts said the group was affected by rumors that the White House will support a tax on crude oil at the refinery

Republicans on the Senate Finance Committee reportedly have reached agreement on $100 billion in tax increases to cut the budget deficit, but the package did oot include the rumored oil tax.

President Reagan said Wednesday night that his tax-cut program was essential to "lasting economic recovery and warned Congress not to weaken it even though the budget deficit is extremely high.

There were some signs of an upturn in the housing market. The government said May construction spending rose 1.3 percent. Also, California housing starts jumped 24.4 percent.

Panhandle Eastern fell 14 to 24%. The company will start re-cording in its financial statements the costs associated with the delay in delivery of liquid natural gas ordered from Algeria, which could lower net earnings.

Eli Lilly lost 14 to 551/2, adding to an identical decline Wednesday, Lilly warned that its oraflex antiarthritic drug should be given in lower dosages to elderly patients.

Boeing Asks U.S. Help in Airbus Competition

By Dan Morgan

WASHINGTON - Bocing charging that European govern-ments have used huge subsidies to promote the sale of the Airbus pasu.S. aircraft industry, has asked the Reagan administration for help in countering the competition. In a May 28 letter to Scartary of Commerce Malcolm Baldrige, Thornton A. Wilson, the Boeing chairman, called for "Cabinet-level attention, competitive export fi-nancing and neutralization of political factors distorting free market trade" to maintain the dominance of the Scattle company, the nation's largest exporter.

The letter followed by two days a meeting between Mr. Wilson and Mr. Baldrige at which Boeing offi-cials called for a new U.S. policy of "forceful trade retaliation" and "linkage" between commercial aircraft sales and military aid to ensure continued U.S. dominance.

Although administration offi-cials say that no decision on what, if any, action should be taken by the government to support Bocing cial arrimers in the 1980s, they acknowledge that the issue could strain already tense relations between the United States and Western Europe on trade issues.

European leaders reacted angu-ly to President Reagan's recently announced measures to block the sale of European pipeline equip-ment to the Soviet Union, and any U.S. attempt to undercut Europe's promising commercial aircraft industry would add to the frictions. Mr. Wilson's proposal that the administration and industry "com-bine efforts" creates other dilemmas for the government.

The administration is philosophically opposed to large-scale cooperation between government and industry, and Boeing is in good health financially. A number of U.S. airline companies, concerned about the existence of a powerful aircraft builder such as Boeing, are pleased at the emergence of strong European competition.

However, financial and political support by the Japanese and Euro-pean governments for promising generation of smaller, wide-bodied pean governments for promising export industries, such as aircraft, have begun to pose increasingly serious problems for U.S. compa-

Mr. Wilson charged, for example, that European governments have pressured home airlines to "buy national" and have provided indirect subsidies worth $5 billion to the Airbus consortium of British, French, West German and Spanish manufacturers.

Recent Threat

Uotil a few years ago, the Airbus posed only a minor threat in the global airliner market to Boeing, with its line of 707s, 727s, 737s and 747s. Bot as fuel costs rose and air travel patterns changed in the late 1970s, competi-planes, the A-300 and the A-310 in Europe and Boeing's 757 and 767.

Except for a 1978 sale of 25 A-300s to Eastern Airlines, Airbus has been unable to penetrate the U.S. market. And except for the sale of some 757s to British Airways. Boeing's new planes have been kept out of Europe. But in the last 24 mooths.

Airbus has cut heavily into Bocing's overseas markets with sales of the 250-seat A-300 and the 220seat A-310 in the Middle East, In-dia, Pakistan, Philippines, Thai-land, Indonesia and Singapore,

At the same time, the Airbus consortium plans a 150-leat A-320, in which a oumber of airlines have expressed interest.

ET it be said, by way of a small gesture in the direction of caveat emptor, that John D. MacDonald certainly takes his jolly good time about getting this, the "20th adventure of Travis McGee," off and rolling. The opening chapter lurches this way and that as McGee — his own narrator, as usual — backs and fills in an effort to connect the events that are to follow "Cinnamon Skin" with those most recently completed in "Free Fall in Crimson." MacDonald comes out of the blocks like a turtle in a 100-yard

But — did you expect otherwise?— once out of them, MacDonald is off on a high-speed chase of precisely the sort that his hundreds of thousands of loyal readers have come to expect of the McGee oovels: "Like a child's game in the Sunday comics. Connect the dots and find the animal." Ah yes. the animal. Almost always there is the animal, an especially loathsome speci-men of the buman variety, a man with a demented appetite for murder or sex or drugs or money — anything that sets him on a path of destruction and McGee on a path calculated to cut him off at the pass, preferably at the last conceivable opportunity.

Here, connecting the dots involves the joint labors of McGee and his friend Meyer, the brilliant and eccen-tric economist who, like McGee, ties up his houseboat at a Fort Lauderdale marina. The trouble is that Meyer's boat has just been blown to kingdom come, with a local fishing guide and Meyer's niece and her new husband aboard. Except that McGee and Meyer soon come upon a photo that suggests the husband, Evan Lawrence, was not aboard. The odor of rat is in the air.

A rat, our doughty investigators soon enough realize, of a particularly odious stripe. Evan Lawrence is only one of many names he has taken in a long history of pursuing, seducing and murdering an unknown number of women. McGee describes him: "My guess would be that he is a bunter. Women are the game he specializes in. He is a loner, A rare kind of loner, a man who seems affable, agreeable, gregarious, fun to have around. That is his act. That's the way be comes up on the blind side, upwind, every move calculated." The effort to track him down takes McGee and Meyer, together and separately, to various places in Texas, to upstate New York, back to Florida, finally to the climactic encounter in Cancun.

The chase is as gripping and divert ing as usual; one of MacDonald; most admirable qualities as a novelis is that he almost unfailingly manager. to deliver precisely the pleasures that his readers anticipate —a quality too little noticed and remarked upor among writers whose principal business it is to entertain. But also as usual, MacDonald provides a good deal more than mere diversion. He is a unkerer in the grand old American traditioo, a man who loves to learn bow things work and a writer who loves to pass that knowledge along to his readers; here he has moch to say, all of it interesting, about how fishing boats work and how geologists explore for oil. He also takes pleasure in tracking the continuing emotional adventures of Travis McGee, the loner who would love to be a husband and father except that be couldn't stand it.

"It made me wish my life had been different and I'd had some sons. Sure, McGee. What you want are the fullgrown variety, big and sturdy and loyal and true. But you never wanted what came in between dispers and shots. PTA and homework, yard mowing retirement programs, Christmowing, retirement programs, Christmas lists, mortgage interest, car payments, dental bills and college tunion. You made your choices, fellow, and you live with the results. And if in the eod there is oobody to give a single particular damn when you die, that too is part of the hargain you made too is part of the bargain you made with life."

This is the point: Without thump-ing any turgid thematic chords, Mac-Donald reminds us that the free life is not all it's cracked up to be. We read McGee — in particular, I think, we men — because his life of adventure, romance and independence is a contemporary, sun-tanned variation upon a yearning that is deeply embedded in American mythology; in the company of McGee, we vicariously light out for the territory and escape from Aunt Sally's civilizing ways. But Mac-Donald, like Twain, understands that it is the fate of most of us to be tied in: one way or another to someone else's aproo strings, and that McGee, for all. his derring-do, exists in a boy's dream, and rather than real life. That MacDonald makes each new chapter of that dream . believable and occasionally breathtaking is testimony to his undiminished skills; after 66 books, he is still going

ON the diagrammed deal South Came up with an imaginative practical bid that turned an impending loss into a big profit. When his partner opened three diamoods, showing a long, strong suit but limited high-card strength, the routine action was to pass. It was rather unlikely, though not impossible, that either side could score a game.

A response of three bearts would have been forcing and showed consid-erable strength. Instead, South jumped to four hearts, simply showing a desire to play that contract. This might have run into a bad misfit and a potential disaster, but it was not likely that the opponents would be able to double for penalties, and they would have trouble judging the situation. When West led the club king,

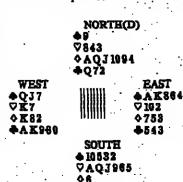

North proudly produced a magic dummy that included three trumps and a singleton. West shifted to the diamond eight, boping to mislead the declarer about the position of the king. But South finessed the queen successfully, threw his remaining clob on the ace and ruffed a diamond. This brought down the king and so far was so good. Now South decided that his best chance was to find an even trump split, so he played the ace and queen of trumps. The break was favorable, and he claimed his game with an overtrick. There was still a trump in the dummy as an entry to the diamonds, so be scored five trump tricks, one ruff and five diamond tricks. There does not seem to be any way to defeat four hearts, if South judges matters accurately. If the defense plays spades immediately, forcing dummy to ruff, South can simply play another club. And if East wins a spade trick and shifts to a trump, South can win the ace and finesse in diamonds to establish that suit: As in the actual play, a trump survives in

At other tables South passed the three-diamond bid and West emerged with a bid of three no-trump ending the auction. This would have been beaten by a heart lead; but since South had not both them, North did not know to lead them. If North lead a diamond, West scored his eighth trick in that suit and his ninth eventually with the heart king. And a passive lead of the spade nine allowed West time to develop clubs.

Russia Eliminates Belgium; Austria Draws With Irish

BARCELONA - The Soviet Union eliminated Belgium from the World Cup soccer champion-ships Thursday night with a 1-0 victory in a lackluster match between two of Europe's supposedly top soccer teams.

Even the goal, when it came three minutes after the interval.

only temporarily relieved an evening of almost complete boredom and ineputude. The 35,000 spectators dotted around the 103,000-capacity Nou Camp stadium showed their disapproval by slow hand-clapping and booing long before

Earlier, in Madrid, Northern Ireland and Austria tied, 2-2, in a match that eliminated the Austri-ans and kept alive Irish hopes of qualifying for the semifinals.

The Russians, who were whis-tled at as they left the field at halftime, were a poor imitation of the fluent team they were in the first round, in the second half they at last created a good move and the only goal.

Going around the long red line of the Belgian defense for the first time. Yuri Gavrilov pulled the ball back from the by-line for midfielder Khoren Oganesian to shoot past Belgium's third-string goalkeeper, Jacques Munaron.

The goal remained the Russians' only shot on target in the entire match, while Belgium, which needed to win to stay in the World Cup, did little better.
The Soviet Unioo and Poland will meet Sunday to decide which team will represent Eastern Europe in the semifinals.

Hamilton, who plays in the English third division for Burnley, scored both goals with beaders inside the box — the first in the 27th minute to put Northern Ireland ahead, 1-0, and the second in the 74th minute to tie the score at 2-2. Austria scored twice in the second half, with goals by Bruno Pezzey in the 49th minute and substi-tule Reinhold Hintermaler in the 67th. The game was played in temperatures that reached 100 degrees Fahrenheit (37 Celsius) before a crowd of only 20,000 in a 62,000-

The semifinalist from Group D will be decided Sunday when Northern Iteland meets France. The French, 1-0 winners over Austria, will start as the favorite and oced only a draw to advance. But Northern Ireland, the only unseeded team to make the second round. is undefeated in four World Cup games.

Northern Ireland's manager, Billy Bingham, declared, "Our character came through when it looked as if we were beaten. France are an extremely good team, but we still have a chance. We are not out of it."

Edmondson Beats Gerulaitis; Connors Defeats Gene Mayer

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches
WIMBLEDON, England —
Mark Edmondson of Australia, the 12th seed, used his service advantage Thursday to upset third-seed-ed Vitas Gerulaitis of the United States, 7-6, 3-6, 6-4, 6-3, and move into the semifinals of the Wimoledon tennis championships.

In another quarterfinal match, second-seeded Jimmy Connors beat sixth-seeded Gene Mayer, 6-1, 6-2, 7-6. Tim Mayotte, an naseeded American, powered his way into the quarterfinals with a 6-2, 7-5, 6-3 upset victory over 15th-seeded Buster Mottram of Britain. He will face Brian Teacher, the 11th-seeded American, who defeated seventh-seeded Mats Wilander of Sweden, 6-4, 6-4, 6-3.

In the women's quarterfinals, Anne Smith, the 13th-seeded American, gave Bettina Bunge a tough fight for two sets before Bunge, the fifth seed from Coral Gables, Fla., won a 6-3, 2-6, 6-0 victors. Rain wheel out a two-hour early ## start to the day's play, and inter-rupted play 43 minutes after it fi-nally began. The covers came off an hour later. Accurate Ground Strokes

In Chicago, Willie Stargell, ap-pearing as a pinch hitter in the sixth inning, hit his first home run Gerulaitis, who had beaten Edmondson in all seven of their previous meetings, spent most of the match attempting to get to the net. But he found himself lunging fu-tilely for the ground strokes that Edmondson delivered with unerring accuracy. Edmondson took a decisive 3-2 edge in the final set with a break in the fifth game, winning when Gerulaitis failed to reach a down-the-line backhand passing shot. The Australian served the next game, as well as the eighth game, at love, and moved to a quick 30-40 edge on Gerulaitis' serve at 3-5. But Gerulaitis fought back to deuce and repelled two advantage points with sharply angled volleys. Edmondson got the advantage for the third time when Gerulaitis put a volley wide, then captured the match by winning an exchange of volleys at the oet.

Connors opened furiously, tak-ing a 5-0 lead in 19 minutes of the first set. But in the last set, Mayer staged a comeback. His deceptivepowerful serve clicked off winners, his drop shots left his opponent flailing, and Connors was missing the corners with his ground strokes.

Both men played baseline tennis, driving each other back with lobs whenever one came to the net. The tiebreaker seesawed evenly, but when Connors broke to his first match point be made no mistake, serving a thundering ace down the center to take the tiebreaker 8-6 and the match. Mayotte, clearly outclassing the more experienced Briton, broke Mottram's serve in the first game only once.

Mottram's only chance to save the match came in the eighth game of the final set when he had four chances to break Mayotte's serve. But the American, a loser in the quarterfinals here last year, hung on to 5-3, and won his next service game to take the match.

Mottram was the second seeded that was the last any resistance tournament. Fourth-seeded Sandy Mayer fell to him in five sets

Wednesday. In the women's quarterfinals. Smith and Bunge took the score to deuce 11 times in the first five games of the match. Bunge, who will now meet top-seeded Martina Navratilova in the semifinals, lost her serving touch in the second set, dropping three service games. But

Henley Regatta Opens; Americans Race Well

By Norman Hildes-Heim

New York Times Service HENLEY-ON-THAMES, England — The first-round elimina-tion heat of the 133d rowing of the Henley Royal Regatta got under way at 9 on Thursday morning By 10, the regatta souvenir shop was sold out of umbrellas and the manicured lawns in the Steward's En-closure more resembled a cow pasture than their usual hunting green, prompting one lady guest to observe. "The place looks just a tiny bit untidy at the moment." The rain that dampened the spectators was not accompanied by wind, creating flat water conditions for the racing and a moderate stream against which the crews Most of the American crews that entered the draw Thursday had a relatively easy time of it. An 'easily" verdict at Henley means victory by more than five boat lengths, and "easily" verdicts predeminated Thursday.

Five of the six U.S. collegiate teams entered in the Ladies' Challenge Plate — the junior varsity heavyweight crews of Yale and the University of California, the lightness the teams of the property of the control of the contr weight varsities of Harvard and the University of Santa Clara, and the Georgetown heavyweight varsity - were not pushed in winning their heats.

Only Losers

The only American losers in the Ladies' Challenge, Dunster House of Harvard, had the further disappointment of losing an afternoon heat of the Visitors' Challenge Cup, for coxless fours. The four Dunster oarsmen racing in the Visitors' Cup had earlier raced in their eight-oar loss, and to compound their disappointment, the Dunster oarsmen drew the Harvard lightweight four in the afternoon. After rowing to the closest finish of the day. Dunster lost in the last stroke of the race by two feet after rowing over a 6,930-foot-long course.

The saddest American result of the day was the climination of the Simsbury, Conn., High School crew in the Princess Elizabeth Challenge Cup for schoolboy eights, when the stroke of the crew. Ernie Tarca broke his boot stretcher 20 strokes into the race and had to stop rowing. There is no considcration for broken equipment at Henley, and Simsbury saw its Hen-ley quest ended in the verdict of "race not rowed out."

The boys of Holy Spirit High School of Absecon, N.J., the other American entry for the Princess Elizabeth Cup, had the scare of their young lives when Emanuel School of England methodically whittled away Holy Spirit's early 1½-length lead. Emanuel fell short of winning he concluded to of winning by one-third of a length, or 20 feet, but as Stan Bargman, Holy Spirit's coach, remarked after the race, "Another 20 feet ...." His voice trailed off. America's only entry in the Double Sculls Challenge Cup. Curt Fleming and Brad Lewis of the Newport Reach, Calif., Rowing

Association, had to fight off jet lag as well as their opponents from the Royal Hong Kong Yacht Club in winning easily as they established themselves as one of the favorites for this event.

An Easy Row

The Charles River Rowing Association, the U.S. national team's training squad, defending its Thames Challenge Cup, had an easy row, courteously dropping its racing cadence to 28 strokes to the minute for more than half the course in winning by three lengths over London's Thames Rowing

Two separate four-oar entries of Worcester, Mass., Polytechnic Institute lost heats in both the Wyfold Cup and the Visitors' Challenge Cup. In the Visitors' event, Worster locked oars with its opponents, Imperial College of London, and was disqualified.

Racing continues Friday, with quarterfinal elimination heats leading to Sunday's final:

Clear the Desk, George

NEW YORK — Memo to the By Russell Baker new secretary of state: Dear George, will you please tend to the following right away? (1) Soviet natural gas pipeline to Western Europe — Stop it from being built. We don't want our NATO pals dependent on Commie gas, do we? Explain why it's better for Europeans to continue paying extortionate prices to Arabs for oil. Think of something to tell George?

them, will you, (2) Wbereabouts of El Salvador — Find out as quick as

Baker you can if El Salvador is still around. It was there a few months ago. We discovered it a year or so back. What a find! The ideal place to defeat Soviet Communism. Our strategy was to hold elections that would give the good guy — Napoleoo Something
Or Other — a mandate for good government. We poured everything into getting those elections held and afterwards the president said it was a great victory. I don't know wby because the good guy — Napoleoo — was beaten. Right after that the whole country disappeared. Find out if it's really gooe or whether the television industry just canceled it on account of low ratings. It's silly having our great victories vanish like this.

(3) Falkland Islands bill — George, let me tell you about Mag-gie Thatcher. For the last few months she has been acting like the real Ronald Reagan. Retaking those sheep-strewn islands cost her a bundle and a half. Let her know right away we can't afford to pick up any of the bill. Our policy is, "billions for the B-l bomber hut oot one cent for sheep fleeces."

(4) Middle East mess — Would you believe that after all the weapons we gave Israel to save the Middle East from Commies, Israel has used them to gut Lebanoo? I get the feeling Israel doesn't respect us anymore, George. Or are they just sore at us because we sold those AWACS planes to Saudi Arabia? Tell them to stop killing and maining helpless people with our hardware. Ask Menachem who be thinks be is. The real Ronald Reagan? But don't hurt his feelings. We have elections coming up here in November and doo't want an avenging Begin campaigning against us.

(5) Great opportunities, exploi-tation of — 1 hear heavy thinkers on television say the Falklands war and Israel's war in Lebanon are creating great opportunities for U.S. foreign policy. Find out immediately what these great opportunities are and take advantage of them right away, George. It's time this administration did something right in foreign policy.

(6) Nuclear freeze movement —

Believe it or oot, millions of people have suddenly started worrying about the world being blown up. How naive can you get? Do people expect to live forever? Unfortunately, they know nothing about the complexities of throw weight and multiple warheads, and need somebody to persuade them that only a handful of experts are smart enough to deal with things like the world being hlown up. While you're about it, we're making some cheerful public noises about worldhlow-up limitation talks with the Russkies. Make a few typically cheerful noises yourself. Nuclear freezers particularly like folk ball, it would help a lot in the com-(7) White House etiquette -What kind of secretary of state can you be if the White House staff doesn't like you? An ex-secretary of state, that's what kind. Get hold of the White House staff first thing and tell them how much you ad-mire them. Ask them what you want them to do, and thank them nicely for telling you, and do it, will you, George, without a lot of songs. If you could learn to pluck out a few guitar chords and sing a few lines about the MX missile being the new Wabash Cannongrumping OK? (8) Rousing of president — Some presidents are fascinated by foreign policy, others like to sleep. President Reagan works best when well rested. Call o pal of his at the White House and ask if it's worth waking the president before you try going right to the top.

P.S.: Would you get together with Cap Weinberger and tell us whether we're planning to explode a "demonstration" atom bomb somewhere in Europe if the Russians invade Western Europe? Cap, Al Haig and the president were terribly confused about this last time it was discussed, and it could be embarrassing if you were surprised when the occasion arose. New York Times Service

Percy Grainger: Honoring a Gifted Eccentric

By Harold C. Schonberg New York Times Service

TEW YORK — The piece is named "The Warriors," it was composed in 1913, and it is in one movement, lasting about 20 minutes. It is scored for three or more pianos, is very heavy on percussion, has an offstage hrass choir, and has so many rhythmic complexities that two or more conductors are needed. It is basically tonal, but has spiky hursts of dissonance.

Obviously a score by Charles

Wrong. Percy Grainger was the composer. To celebrate his 100th birthday (he was born in Melbourne, Australia, oo July 8, 1882). Gerard Schwartz will conduct "The Warriors" at the Waterlon Music Festival on Saturday in Stanhope, N.J.. In addition, at his Goodman House concerts for 1982-83. Schwarz will honor Grainger's memory hy reviving other pieces.

paying bomage to the once-fapianist-composer. From July 20 through July 25, Ainslee Cox will conduct the Guggenbeim Concert Baod io a Grainger/Robert Russell Bennett Festival at Lincoln Center's Damrosch Park. Morning sessions at the Bruno Walter Auditorium in Lincoln Center during that week will bave Grainger seminars and vocal and instrumental soloists. Presumably there will be many other Grainger celebrations in the United States and abroad during the centennial year.

Daring Pieces

Grainger wrote an immense amount of music in his life, most of which is unknown. He was an avant-gardist and a pioneer in folk-music research. Yet the pieces for which he is remembered today are of the "Country Gardens" and "Molly on the Shore"

Grainger at the piano: A life full of contradictions.

EAR CORBEL, 45 kms. Poris, owner

He is not the only conductor variety - pleasant and charming, but essentially salon works.
Grainger must have come to loathe "Country Gardens."

For he composed some remarkably ambitious, daring pieces, and it was by those that he desperately wanted to be remembered. When the few musicians who know Grainger's big scores talk about the music, the name of ives invariably comes up. But the chances are that Grainger had never heard a oote of Ives' music, though in many respects he was working in much the same direc-

He was a strange man, an eccentric all the way through, and his life was full of contradictions. The facts of his life are detailed in the recently revised biography by John Bird, published by Faber & Faber. Until Bird's researches (from which much of the information in this article is derived) came out, many of us who admired Grainger and his music did not realize just how peculiar the man was. We knew of his obvious eccentricities - how he was a physical culture faddist who sometimes hiked from concert to concert, and how he inveighed against German hegemony in mu-

We were amused and enchanted when we looked up the newspaper reports of his marriage to Viola Ström in 1928. For the wedding, he took over the Hollywood Bowl. First he played, at a regular coocert. At the end of the concert he conducted the orchestra in his own "To a Nordic Princess" (Viola was Swedish). Then she came forth and the marriage ceremony took place on stage, before the Hollywood Bowl audience of about 15,000.

But who would have known that Grainger's sex life was in-volved with flagellation and sadomasochism? That he was an atheist who could rail against "Anglo-Saxon morality, goodygooddy-ness & cant"? That he was a virulent racist with a special antipathy to Jews? (He was convinced that all important composers had blue eyes. Grainger had blue eyes.) That he had constant incest fantasies? (There is every indication that his relationship with his domineering, neurotic mother — who committed suicide in 1922 - had its incestuous ternational career. He had a powerful technique (much better than some critics have indicated), the kind of singing tone characteristic of most 19th-century pianists. rock-steady rhythm, and a wonderfully breezy, uninhibited way of approaching music.

His repertory reflected his romanticism. It has bittle Bach (except in transcription), no Mozart or Haydn that one can remember, little Beethoven or Schubert. But, starting from Schumann, Chopin and Liszt, a good part of the 19th century was his. Fortunately be left many records from 1969, mail near his cords, from 1908 until near his death in 1961, and it is an impressive legacy.

It was as a composer, however, that be wanted to be known. He was a popular pianist who spent his life on the concert stage in order to make enough money to be able to compose. He never took his own playing very seriously, and it always seemed to amaze him that audiences did. Toward the end he almost went broke because he would give his services to orchestras free if they would play his music. He invented the term "free music." By that he meant a music freed from traditional techniques. He boasted that he had divorced himself from "the filthy Sonata-Symphony form." There was a strong parallel with what Ives was doing. Grainger, like Ives, would juxtapose unrelated melodies so that they came together in discordant clashes.

As early as the turn of the century he was experimenting with irregular meters, and some of the combinations are so difficult to count that the music is all but unplayable. Again the parallel with Ives is unmistakable. With such a score as "Random Round" in 1912 he anticipated the aleatory and indeterminacy of John Cage and Karlheinz Stockhausen. Thematic material in "Random Round is, according to Bird, "treated in 10 to 20 variant forms and, to a harmonic ostinato strummed on a guitar, the vocalists and/or instrumentalists are at liberty to take any variant at any time, at any speed, and jump to another at will (but at the correct terested in any kind of ethnic music, and he did a great deal of original work with English folk song; be was for many years associated with the English Folk Mosic Society.

Recording Singers

Grainger went into the field with a cylinder recording appara-tus, asking elderly people to sing for him, recording them, later oo-tating the results. He was amazed by the rhythmic freedom of the singers and their music, by the modal-sounding scales they used and the microtones that entered their singing, by the legacy that was represented, by the individual ornamentation of the various

He was also interested in new instruments that woulds produce new kinds of sound, and in this he anticipated Edgard Varèse. Grainger invented several himself. Many of his scores call for what he named "tuneful percussion," an ensemble consisting of glockenspiel, Swiss bandbells, tubular bells, metal and wooden marimba and xylophone - an ensemble, in short, of the nature so favored by the serial composers 25 years ago. Grainger always insisted that he had been the first to use many of the 20th century's musical innovations.

"The Warriors," hy the way, calls for "tuneful percussion." In Chicago, Grainger once played "The Warriors" under the direction of Frederick Stock. He used 30 pianists on 19 pianos. Mr. Schwarz will not be using 30 pianists Saturday.

Original in everything he did, Grainger also used language in a manner so imaginative that it approaches poetry. His music and letters are peppered with descrip-tions in his own kind of Anglo-Saxon English. Not for him "alle-gro" or "forte" or "ritardando." When he wanted a big sound he would write "louden lots." Grainger today? Who knows? This apostle of "free music" is simply oot played enough. We have very little to go on. His major scores are still in manuscript or lying oeglected in libraries. We do not know whether he had a strong message or whether his theories resulted in featureless note-spinning. Perhaps the Grainger centenary will spark enough performances of the major works to give a real idea of what he actually represented.

Die on Way to Reagan

Diana, Princess of Wales, was 21 Thursday. Newspapers printed greetings and a special portrait of her by the photographer Lord Snowdon, but Buckingham Palace said she had been so busy since the birth of her son that no celebrations had been planned. Last year.

Oueen Elizabeth II's son Prince Andrew had his 21st birthday party four months after his birthday. Meanwhile, Diana's son, Prince-William of Wales, is already being commemorated on spoons, stamps and porcelain roses - at very royal prices. Businessmen hoping to cash in on the birth uf the future king began advertising a host of mail-order souvenirs within 3t hours of his arrival June 21. For £29.95 (about $54) there's a solid silver baby spood, with the initials of William's parents, Prince Charles and Diana, set in entwined hearts. The big spender can get an eight-piece royal baby collection, including a three-piece pewter coffee service, a silver and gilt gobiet, a silver enamel box, a pair of porcelain plates and a porcelain rose with a silver stem for £739.80.
